Case Reports in Internal Medicine (CRIM) 2027

Case Report Submission Guidelines

Information for submission

SIMON Case Reports in Internal Medicine 2027 is a half-day symposium to be conducted on January 16, 2027. All cases of internal medicine can be submitted by clinicians. An independent panel will shortlist the case reports and posters. Final selection of the winning case reports/ posters will be made by a jury panel during the symposium.

Submission details

The submitting/ presenting author must be a medical doctor. Medical students and interns without permanent registration at the Nepal Medical Council should not submit as presenting authors. All authors should provide their ORCID (Open Researcher and Contributor ID; www.orcid.org) if available.

The case report must be original observations on diagnosis or treatment. It must be an original work and must not have been published before. It should represent either some form of rare conditions, or unusual presentation or complications of a relatively common condition, or a difficult path to diagnosis, or cases of high educational value for other reasons.

English (British) is the only language for submission, presentation and publication. Medical jargon should be avoided. The use of abbreviations should be limited, with preference for those recognized internationally. Abbreviations should be spelled out at first mention except for those commonly used (eg, ECG).
